Club Attendance

Make-up missed meetings by visiting another club. It's a great way to see the character of different clubs, how they operate, what they are involved in and to meet other Rotarians! Even if your schedule does not allow you to attend a meeting, you can do your make-up via the web at a Rotary e-Club. Spending 30 minutes on-line constitutes a make-up! Here is the address to one of the best: <http://www.rotaryclubone.org>.

A ROTARY SONG, by Bob Bailes

I am just a little bird with a broken wing.
 I may not be able to fly but I can sing.
 I am just an ordinary guy with a helping hand.
 I guess that's why they call me a Rotarian.

Folk singer turned peace fellow is changing the world

Rotarians who support the Rotary Peace Centers program are helping to change the world by investing in young people with a track record of good works.

That's what David LaMotte, a 2008-10 Rotary Peace Fellow, told attendees at the International Assembly, a training session for incoming district governors. He thanked Rotary leaders for giving him the opportunity to broaden his skills and become part of the network of peace fellows.

Unlike many academic scholarships, LaMotte said, Rotary Peace Fellowships require applicants to be more than promising young leaders. "Rather, it targets people who are midcareer and already have a track record of doing good work."

He added that Rotarians "are making a big investment, and it is wise of you to make it carefully, in order to maximize the return. Based on the peace fellows I know, you have been choosing very well."

LaMotte described himself as an unlikely candidate for the program. A folk singer, he has performed 20,000 concerts on four continents and released 10 CDs. But because of his interest in working for peace, he took a break from his singing career to pursue a master's degree at the University of Queensland as a Rotary Peace Fellow.

"I never let go of my passion for peace," he said. "I continued to look for opportunities to learn and to contribute."
